SATURDAY SELECTS
Week of September 9, 2019
by Monica Khemsurov

A weekly Saturday recap to share with you our favorite links, discoveries, exhibitions, and more from the past seven days. This week: the latest exhibition of enigmatic work by Jonathan Muecke, several new specimens of curvy and blobby furniture, and a show of paintings by Brian Rideout whose source material is 1970s interior photography (above).

Exhibitions

We keep getting emails from galleries about their presentations at Expo Chicago and its new sister fair, NADA's Chicago Invitational, and the work coming through is pretty great for a city we don't usually associate with contemporary art. The pieces above are lovely sculptures by Marie Herwald Hermann for Detroit-based Reyes Finn, to be presented at the NADA show starting Wednesday.
